

P4H Leadership for Universal Health Coverage (L4UHC) Program Module 3, April 24-28, 2017 - United Nations University, Tokyo, Japan

BACKGROUND: While there is widespread support for the idea of UHC, actually realizing UHC at country level is contentious. Key players and groups hold divergent interests, and technical efforts to advance reform often stall when these interests cannot be aligned. Skilled leadership is required to work through competing views, unite diverse groups behind a shared vision, and broker the trade-offs and compromises that are needed to keep complex UHC reform processes on track.

OVERVIEW OF THE PROGRAM: L4UHC is organized in a series of three modules and two practical phases. During each module, participants undertake field visits to immerse themselves in the details of the host country’s UHC experience, including meetings with reform leaders who represent different institutions and stakeholder groups. During the practical phases in their home countries, participants meet and work together as country teams, with support from local coaches.

L4UHC OBJECTIVE: To move the UHC process forward in the participant countries by supporting the country counterparts (as individuals and as country teams) with leadership competency development, coalition building support and results-oriented collective action initiatives.

OBJECTIVES MODULE 3

1. Participants have reflected on the learnings from the overall program and particularly their collective action process.
2. Participants have defined the next steps towards UHC reform in their countries and have committed themselves to a set of key actions. They have shared these results with relevant stakeholders and development partners, who will continue to support the reform process after L4UHC has ended.
3. There is an increased sense of collective purpose among participants.
4. Participants have learned from the host country’s UHC reform case.

DELIVERABLES

1. To share the analysis of results with a wider stakeholder base.
2. To surface the leadership lessons learned individually and as a collective.
3. To develop a roadmap for the future.
